Greetings,

I will gladly accept your kind invitation for tomorrow. Hence, I'll stay in your guest room for the night.

Yours sincerely,
Heinrich Wieland

Freiburg, December 13, 1922

It is certainly easiest if I proceed directly from the train station to the secretariat, where you will find me before the lecture. I will bring my dinner with me.

Please don't go to extra lengths for me. At the moment, the express trains are often very late and consequently, I may take the earlier regional train.

Many thanks in advance, and for your efforts with the lecture.
